Campaign for Timor sea oil and gas.

Burning Issue

Following requests from partners and human rights organisations in East Timor, Union Aid Abroad – APHEDA, along with many Australian unions, churches and development agencies has been campaigning to secure a just share for East Timor of the oil and gas resources in the Timor Sea.

The Timor Sea is rich in petroleum resources, but Australia is claiming most of the Timor Sea as Australian territory, and hence the royalties from the sale of this oil and gas.

The present boundary was negotiated between Australia and Indonesia in 1972, and is based on the continental shelf. It gives Australia about 75% of the seabed between the two countries. However, a gap in the boundary, known as the Timor Gap, was left because Portugal, the colonial rulers in East Timor, refused to negotiate, insisting on a border mid-way between the two countries. A further boundary agreement for revenue sharing in the disputed gap section opposite East Timor was agreed between Australia and Indonesia in 1989.

The UN Convention on the Law of the Sea, developed in 1982, recommended that where countries are less than 400 nautical miles apart, the boundary be drawn equidistant between the two countries. This Convention has been reinforced by prevailing international law. In May 2002, East Timor and Australia signed the Interim Timor Sea Treaty which gives East Timor 90% of the revenues within a small area of the Timor Sea previously called the Timor Gap, but now known as the Joint Petroleum Development Area (JPDA). However it is clear that were the border to run mid-way between the two countries, and the lateral boundaries be drawn perpendicular according to international law, East Timor's actual entitlements are much larger than just the small area of the JPDA. The extra territory to which East Timor is entitled would include significantly more resources, including a greater share of the massive Greater Sunrise gas field. It is estimated that if oil was $US 40 a barrel, then Australia could be depriving East Timor of up to $30 billion of royalties which are rightfully theirs over the next 20 years under the existing Australian-recognised borders. The East Timorese are upset and angry that while Australia gives East Timor $40 million a year in aid, we are taking $350 million a year in oil revenue which they believe is rightfully theirs. Australia has withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the International Court for maritime boundary issues, so East Timor suspects that Australia is attempting to draw out border negotiations over 20 years until the oil and gas is depleted. "For us, a 20-year negotiation is not an option. Timor Leste loses $1 million a day due to Australia's unlawful exploitation of resources in the disputed area." (East Timor Prime Minister, Mari Alkatiri 29/4/04)

We believe that during this dispute, Australia should negotiate in good faith, return to the International Court, and revenue from the East Timorese oil and gas fields should be held in escrow or trust until a decision is reached. "Australia, Timor-Leste and Indonesia need to reach an agreement on the basis of international law in order to achieve an equitable solution – seeking not charity but justice – just a fair go for all three parties." (Frank Brennan SJ The Timor Sea's Oil and Gas: What's Fair)

We believe Australia should negotiate in good faith, return to the International Court, and revenue from the East Timorese oil and gas fields should be held in escrow or trust until a decision is reached.

Justice

UNION AID ABROAD – APHEDA
Global Justice Program

GLOBAL JUSTICE PROGRAM

The Global Justice Program is a means for Australian workers to directly support projects in developing countries that are assisting self-reliance for workers and their communities. To become a member of the Global Justice Program you simply make a regular, tax-deductible donation to APHEDA's overseas projects. The Global Justice program currently gives you the choice of directing your donation to one of 15 project areas. So, whether your interest is in strengthening trade unions in developing countries, providing vocational training to women from the poorest villages in South East Asia, providing medical support to people with HIV/Aids in Africa or training local people in how to teach these skills, the Global Justice Program is the ideal way to show men and women in developing countries who struggle daily for survival that they are not alone.

ANNUAL RAFFLE

Union Aid Abroad-APHEDA runs a raffle from March to June each year. With the first prize being a trip for two people around the world and a network of ticket sellers across the country, the APHEDA annual raffle constitutes our largest appeal. Members Equity, ACTU Member Connect and Virtual Communities proudly support the raffle.

APHEDA ACTIVIST GROUPS

Activist groups in each capital city of Australia support the work of Union Aid Abroad-APHEDA and provide a local connection to our work. The convenors of these groups work tirelessly to ensure that people in their state can be mobilised to take action in support of workers and their families in developing countries, whether that be letter writing on a campaign issue or holding an event to raise funds.
